Tourism, Aalborg campus:

The number and distribution of respondents – 38, 20 of these semester 7th semester – the remaining 18 9th semester. For 7th semester this gives us a low response rate. It is therefore difficult to make any valid generalizations based on this evaluation.

72% reports spending more than 30 hours on their studies each week, 17% spend between 10 and 30 hours per week. 11% state that the use between 10 and 20 hours. Overall this is a highly positive development bearing in mind that a workload of 37.5 hours per week is required.

Students generally feel well-informed about objectives and purposes of the programme modules, as well as practical information about the programme.

A majority of respondents find that the benefit of the different study activities has been ‘big’/’very big’ (72%) or ‘average’ (28%). None find the academic outcome to have been ‘small’ or ‘very small’.

The majority of responding students are happy with (or indifferent about) the project formation process (75%). Only 1 student (6%) find that it wasn’t satisfactory.

An impressive 80% feel project (team) work went well, only one student (7%) was not satisfied.
